Our visit to Alcatraz was probably the most memorable part for me. Being in that same space where people spent so many of their days... impossible to describe but also something I think everyone should do."

—Jordan, drama teacher

Named for the strait it is perched above, the Golden Gate Bridge spans one mile and marks where the San Francisco Bay meets the Pacific Ocean. This suspension bridge opened May 27, 1937 and was named one of the Wonders of the Modern World by the American Society of Civil Engineers in 1994.
